You have a general right to access the patient records (subject to some exceptions which mainly relate to privacy, health, child consent or legal considerations) and a request must be made in writing. Dear parent / caregiver / primary carer / legal guardian;

Working with young people presents certain issues and legislation that psychologists must adhere to. The following clarifies where our role as a Psychologist starts and ends. It also outlines our ethical and legal responsibilities with regards to working with young people.

A young person is defined as "someone under the age of 18years old". A client-parent (or parents) is "the person who engages the psychologist to provide a psychological service for a young person".

Whilst we do our best to communicate with the client-parent regarding the progress of the young person in counselling, we cannot disclose any personal information unless we gain a written consent from the client i.e. "the young person", or if they are deemed too young to understand these terms, disclosure to the client parent can occur.

I give permission for (young person's name) _____ to attend ongoing appointments without my presence. I understand that I will still be required to be available via preferred mobile/telephone number and/or email for communication about their treatment and progress with treatment.

Permission is given for AAG Clinical Psychology Practice to release personal information and engage in professional correspondence with persons indicated below, where it is judged relevant for professional, clinical involvement and when necessary for informed clinical judgement. I also give consent for my Psychologist to have access to official records and information. I give consent for all information to be used by the clinicians directly involved in my treatment, and to be safely stored and owned by the AAG Clinical Psychology Practice.
